UNISONA.AI MONTHLY · VOL. 1 · FOR EVERY USER - NO HOMEWORK REQUIRED

The July Leap

World news in plain money-sense · where a spare $20 goes · the monthly postcard from our robot trader. Data through Friday, July 17 close. Published July 18, 2026.

Hi - welcome to the first Leap. If we haven't met: we keep a house strategy here nicknamed the champion - a robot-managed recipe of eight funds (you'll get every ticker on page 4). We test it the honest way: a simulator started it with $2,000 + $20 a month in January 2000 and replayed every real market day since, crashes included, no peeking. That story stands at $91,537 tonight. July asked it a real question - war headlines, oil up, the hot stocks suddenly cold - and it answered the way we hoped it would: calmly. You don't need our plan, or any plan, to use these pages; borrow the habits with any $20 on any app. We'll be here every month either way.

- the unisona.ai trading desk · P.S. Our robot's live practice book: $24,997.62 at 2.0× - all three of its tripwires green. Real money stays parked behind the evidence gate, as always.

The whole flight in one picture: the gold comet is the champion ($8,380 total paid in, dashed line). The cyan line is the same drip into a plain S&P 500 fund (ticker SPY) - $54,278, no robot needed, and still a lovely flight. Four storms, sailed through, dotted in blue.

THE BOARD · FRIDAY'S CLOSING MARKS

SPY $743.29 Fri -1.0% · wk -1.5%	VIX 18.77 calm is under 20	10-YR 4.55% off 4.62% high	WTI $82+ +10% on the week	GOLD $4,017 +20% in a year	FED JUL 28-29 hold expected

The word for July is poise. The champion's balance eased -6.4% as the market rotated - and a dip this size has visited 24 times in 26 years, every one followed, in time, by a new high. So the robot's answer was the calmest sentence it knows: all gates green, keep cruising, keep dripping. Poise, practiced.

PART 1 · THE SCOREBOARD

The month so far, on one card

Market	Friday's mark	Last week	2026 so far
S&P 500 · SPY	7,458 (-1.0%)	-1.6%	+9.6% first half
Nasdaq · QQQ	-1.5% Friday	-2.9%	strongest Q2 since 2020
Small caps · IWM	$294.04	cooled with peers	+21.2% H1 - biggest lead on the S&P since 1991
World stocks · EFA	$103.33	steadier	beat the S&P in June
Long bonds · TLT	$84.52	10-yr at 4.55%	off its 4.62% high
Gold · GLD	$4,017/oz	about -3%	-4.6% in July · +19.9% in a year
Oil · WTI crude	$82+	+10%	highest in a month
The champion (sim)	$91,537	eased	-6.4% in July · +7.2% YTD

Friday, July 17 close. Under the hood, the market is broadening, not breaking: seven of eleven S&P sectors rose in June (industrials led), profits are beating estimates, and the selling is concentrated in the year's hottest corner - chips. Sources: Trading Economics, CNBC, Morgan Stanley/E*TRADE monthly commentary; the champion is our walk-forward simulation.

PART 2 · FOUR STORIES, FROM THE TOP

The news, explained like you were away all month

Oil jumped 10% as the Middle East flared up again

THE BACKSTORY

A large share of the world's oil ships through one narrow sea lane - the Strait of Hormuz, between Iran and the Arabian peninsula. Whenever that lane looks risky, oil gets pricier everywhere, because tankers wait, insure, or take the long way round.

WHAT JUST HAPPENED

A June truce between the US and Iran gave way in mid-July: strikes resumed on both sides and far fewer tankers made the passage - about half the usual traffic in a day. Crude climbed above $82 a barrel, its highest in a month, up 10% for the week (CNBC, July 16).

WHY IT TOUCHES YOUR WALLET

Pricier oil seeps into daily life with a lag: the pump first, then flights, shipping, and some grocery prices. It can also make the inflation-watchers at the central bank more cautious about cutting interest rates. Markets themselves stayed remarkably calm - the 'fear index' traders watch (the VIX) reads a mellow 18.8, which is normal-weather territory.

THE TAKEAWAY

Storm headlines are not an instruction to do anything. Keeping a cash cushion and letting a monthly auto-investment run is the whole move. Our robot's version of the same idea: it re-checks the weather every minute, ready to glide toward interest-earning cash - and this month it never needed to. Worth knowing: the pros' June notes celebrated this strait reopening; July closed it again. Headlines age fast - habits don't.

The rotation, and the people who set the price of money

The market's favorite stocks changed seats

THE BACKSTORY

For two years the star performers were computer-chip and AI companies - they powered a huge run. Markets rotate, though: sooner or later money takes profits from the leaders and goes looking for the next value, and the leaderboard reshuffles. It's regular weather, not an alarm.

WHAT JUST HAPPENED

That rotation arrived in July. Chip stocks slid on worries that the big AI buyers may slow their spending: on Friday alone the S&P 500 fell 1.0% to 7,458, the Nasdaq 1.5%, and the Dow 407 points, capping a -1.6% week. The quiet part: seven of eleven S&P sectors actually ROSE in June (industrials led), small companies are having their best lead over the S&P since 1991 (+21.2% first half), and 87% of early earnings beat expectations (Trading Economics, CNBC, Seeking Alpha, E*TRADE commentary, July 16-18).

WHY IT TOUCHES YOUR WALLET

If your savings live in a broad index fund, a week like this barely dents a decades-long plan. If you were tempted by 'the hot stock everyone mentions,' July is the case for spreading out: last month's rocket can be this month's cooldown - while quieter corners (small caps, world stocks) quietly carry the year.

THE TAKEAWAY

Own a little of everything and you never have to guess the next favorite. That's the whole trick behind index funds - and behind our robot's eight-ticker mix, which holds the winners' lane (SPMO, XMMO), the quiet leaders (IWM, EFA), and the ballast, all at once.

The Fed holds interest rates steady - and cash still pays

THE BACKSTORY

The Federal Reserve - 'the Fed' - is America's central bank. Its main dial is the interest rate: turning it up makes borrowing pricier and saving more rewarding (to cool inflation); turning it down does the reverse. Eight times a year its committee meets, and the world watches - these days under a new chair, Kevin Warsh, whose talk runs hawkish.

WHAT JUST HAPPENED

The next meeting is July 28-29 and everything points to no change. June's inflation readings came in gentler than expected, though officials stay watchful with oil rising. The honest wrinkle: most economists expect a hold through 2026, while rate-futures traders still price real odds of a hike by December - the pros disagree, and we'd rather tell you that than pick a side (Fed minutes July 8; CNBC; E*TRADE commentary).

WHY IT TOUCHES YOUR WALLET

This is the friendliest fact in finance right now: boring cash earns real interest again. High-yield savings accounts and money-market funds pay meaningful yields while rates hold - an emergency fund is no longer dead money, it's a small engine.

THE TAKEAWAY

Before any investing move, park one: a cushion in a high-yield account is the purchase that buys sleep. Our robot agrees so strongly it's built in - when it de-risks, it parks in interest-earning cash, never under a mattress.

PART 2, CONCLUDED

The old anchor, the little dictionary, and the road ahead

Gold is having a golden year

THE BACKSTORY

Gold is humanity's oldest savings account - no company behind it, no interest paid, just scarcity and trust. People reach for it when they're unsure about everything else, which is why it often (not always) rises when stocks or currencies wobble.

WHAT JUST HAPPENED

It sits near $4,017 an ounce - up about 20% from a year ago even after a breather this month (Trading Economics, July 17). The year's conflicts and inflation worries kept the old anchor in demand.

WHY IT TOUCHES YOUR WALLET

You don't need coins in a drawer to benefit; a small slice of a gold fund inside a mixed portfolio does the same job - it tends to zig when stocks zag, smoothing the ride. The key word is slice: gold pays no interest, so all-in is a bet, not a plan.

THE TAKEAWAY

A pinch of gold as seasoning, never the whole meal. In our robot's $20 pour it's $2.80 - enough anchor to steady the boat, never enough to slow the voyage.

The little dictionary - six words this report just used

Index fund - one purchase that buys a tiny slice of hundreds of companies at once. The classic is the S&P 500.

Drip (auto-invest) - the same small amount invested every month, automatically - rain, shine, or headlines.

The Fed - America's central bank. Sets the price of borrowing; meets next July 28-29.

VIX - the market's mood ring - a fear gauge. Under 20 reads calm; July 17 read 18.8.

Momentum - owning a little extra of whatever has already been winning lately.

Dip - how far a balance sits below its best-ever mark. The champion's July dip: 11%.

The road ahead - what the pros have circled

When	What	Why it's circled
Wed, Jul 22	Alphabet & Tesla report earnings (plus ServiceNow, Texas Instruments)	Alphabet's AI-spending plans are THE tell for the whole chip story above
Thu-Fri, Jul 23-24	Intel, Honeywell, Lockheed, Blackstone; then American Express	earnings season is running +23% vs last year so far (FactSet)
Tue-Wed, Jul 28-29	The Fed meets	hold expected; the tone under new chair Warsh is the story
Every market minute	Our robot re-checks its three tripwires	boring by design - that's the product

A light week for economic data (jobless claims, PMI, new-home sales) and a heavy one for earnings - calendar via CNBC's week-ahead and Yahoo Finance (July 17).

PART 3 · YOUR NEXT $20

Three lanes - start where you're standing

Twenty dollars a month sounds small; the chart on page 1 is what it looks like grown up. Pick the lane that matches your life today - each one is a complete, respectable answer.

LANE 1 · THE GUARANTEED WIN - claim this first

If any card or loan is charging you double-digit interest, your next $20 earns its best return by shrinking that balance - an instant, sure gain no market can promise. Sorted? Then build the cushion: a few hundred in a high-yield savings account, which finally pays real interest while rates hold. Cushion first, adventure second - every good plan starts here.

LANE 2 · THE ONE-FUND DRIP - the everyone answer

A $20 automatic monthly buy of one broad, low-cost index fund at any major app or broker. Fractional shares mean twenty is plenty; automation means willpower is never invited. This is the cyan line on page 1: $8,380 dripped in since 2000 became $54,278 - through four storms - with zero decisions along the way. Set it on payday and forget it's happening.

LANE 3 · THE CHAMPION'S POUR - for the curious

The robot's own recipe, if you enjoy a richer mix: eight ingredients, poured by target weights, a little extra to whatever's drifted cheap. Here is exactly how it would split a twenty this month:

one twenty, eight tickers - poured automatically, every month

Ticker	Fund	What it is	Fri close	Weight	Of your $20
SPY	The S&P 500	the 500 biggest US companies, one bundle	$743.29	34%	$6.75
TLT	Long US bonds	20+ year loans to the US government - ballast	$84.52	21%	$4.15
QQQ	The tech 100	the Nasdaq's engine room	$695.33	15%	$3.00
GLD	Gold	the ancient anchor, in fund form	$368.41	14%	$2.80
IWM	Small companies	the Russell 2000 - tomorrow's mid-caps	$294.04	5.5%	$1.10
EFA	Rest of the world	big developed markets beyond the US	$103.33	4.6%	$0.90
XMMO	Momentum, mid-size	mid-caps already winning	$157.08	3.7%	$0.75
SPMO	Momentum, large	large-caps in the winners' lane	$143.89	2.9%	$0.55

Lifetime-average recipe, weights rounded (the momentum slices grow as their track record does); closes are Friday 7/17 marks from our live monitor. Fractional shares make every slice buyable with pocket change - and any lane can graduate to the next whenever you're ready.

Lean on, glide past, and where this could fly

Lean on these

THE DRIP ITSELF - Twenty in, every month, rain or shine. Across everything our lab has tested, the steady contribution beats every clever tweak. Level it up when life allows.

BORING BALLAST - Cushion cash that earns interest, bonds, a pinch of gold - the unglamorous pieces are what let you stay invested when headlines shout.

TIME & AUTOMATION - The chart's secret isn't genius - it's 319 straight months of showing up. Automate the showing up and you've automated the hard part.

Glide past these

CHASING THE HOT STOCK - July's coolest lesson: the spring's rockets took the summer's sharpest turn. A broad mix already owns tomorrow's winner - no guessing required.

BORROWING TO INVEST - Leverage looks magic in good months and bites in bad ones. Our robot practices it in a gated paper account; personal money flies best unborrowed.

WATCHING DAILY - A drip plan pays you for patience - every dip your $20 lands in is a discount. The scoreboard worth reading prints monthly. This is it.

THE 24-FOR-24 BADGE. A month like July (-6.4%) has visited the champion's arc 24 times since 2000 - the dot-com winter, 2008, the 2020 flash-storm, the 2022 bear. After all 24, the balance went on to a brand-new high. Number 25 is now on the clock, chasing the May peak of $103,189. History measured, future unwritten - but that is one well-rehearsed bounce.

The leap - if the next years rhyme with the last 26

From the champion's $91,537 + $20/month	by 2031	by 2036
At its measured pace (12.6%/yr)	about $167,000	about $304,000
At the plain index-fund pace (10.0%/yr)	about $148,000	about $241,000
New money added along the way	$1,200	$2,400

Paces are what each line actually measured, 2000-2026; the future keeps its own counsel. The drip, the mix, and patience do the promising here - not the projection.

The dials - for readers who trade

Universe: SPY · QQQ · IWM · EFA · TLT · GLD · XMMO · SPMO, weighted by a shrunk tangency optimizer (per-fund cap 35%), rebalanced with a 0.6%-of-equity no-churn band - about monthly in practice. Exposure dial: gross 0 to 2.0×, set by a streaming brake = 35% volatility target × 6-month trend gate (to cash) × drawdown taper that begins at -30%; idle cash earns T-bill interest. Current stance: gross 2.0×, all three tripwires green, book drawdown -11% vs the -30% taper. A Conservative mode (max 1.0×, never borrows, 12-month trend, wider band, ~1 trade/month) shipped this month for funded balances. Paper only; live capital stays gated on out-of-sample evidence.

Where every number comes from

Champion balances & the chart: unisona.ai walk-forward simulation, 2000-2026, re-run July 17 (real market history, borrowing costs charged, no peeking; monthly path on file). Practice book, ETF closes & robot status: live monitor state, July 18, 17:38 UTC. Market weather & indexes: Trading Economics and the July 18 feed (VIX 18.77). World news & calendar: CNBC (July 8-17), Seeking Alpha (July 17), Federal Reserve minutes (July 8), Morgan Stanley/E*TRADE monthly commentary (July), FactSet earnings via CNBC.

THE BACK PAGE

About The Leap

What this is. The Sigma Trader Report is unisona.ai's monthly letter for every user - free and paid, beginner and trader. Each issue, in order: the scoreboard, the month's stories explained from the top, the road ahead, where a spare $20 goes, and the champion's numbers with their habits. It ships as a PDF on the site under /reports/ in the third week of the month. How to read it: measured numbers come from real history or our live practice book; projected numbers are clearly labeled rhymes, never promises; the guaranteed row is always the money you put in.

THE FINE PRINT, IN PLAIN ENGLISH. This report is education, not personalized investment, tax, or legal advice, and not an offer or recommendation to buy or sell anything. The champion's track record is a simulation on real historical prices (borrowing costs charged; taxes not modeled); its live book is practice money; simulated and past performance never guarantee future results. Prices, yields, and dates are as shown and have moved since. Tickers describe our practice mix, not endorsements. Investing involves risk, including loss of what you put in; markets can fall by half and stay down for years. unisona.ai is software, not a registered investment adviser or broker-dealer - before acting on anything here, consider your own situation, ideally with a licensed advisor.

Until August - keep the drip alive. - the unisona.ai trading desk